Task II: Gapped Summary(8)

(Text II: A 'reversible' form of death?)

Fill the gaps in the summary with appropriate words or expressions (one word per line) from the corresponding sections of the text. Do not make any changes. Please also provide the number of the line in which you have found the word / expression.

Traditionally, "life" and "death" are considered clear-cut terms. However, recent experiments with dead pigs carried out by the Yale School of Medicine have the potential to tear down this _____ (l. ____). The scientists succeeded in reviving the cells in important organs of the animals by injecting OrganEx, which contained _____ (l. ____) to make sure there was no cerebral activity.

According to a renowned law scholar, such science challenges our definition of death as an unchangeable _____ (l. ____). Another expert of law and ethics compares this issue with the advent of the _____ (l. ____), which fueled a similar debate at the time.

Ultimately the scientists from Yale aim to benefit humanity with their work by increasing the availability of _____ (l. ____) human organs for transplantation even if the donors died a significant time ago.

Dr. Porte, a transplant surgeon, stresses that presently doctors often can only _____ (l. ____) internal body parts too late, because the patient's brain has not stopped working. With OrganEx, doctors might be able to take out organs from people who are not technically dead yet, provided that any attempt at saving their lives would be _____ (l. ____).

Brendan Parent comments that this procedure presupposes that OrganEx is free of substances deactivating the brain, which causes _____ (l. ____) ethical issues for the future.

Task III: Mediation Englisch-Deutsch(10)
